x | Mr. PIDDINGTON called attention to the fact that

Pittsborough called attention to the fact that the Estimates for this year were £90,000 in excess of last year. He wished to know how the Government, for the excuse the Government urged, the Revenue was so much in excess of the estimate. He denied that the additional taxation of 1865 had been sufficient to wipe away the deficit of that and previous years, for the Ways and Means for this year showed that there was an excess of £100,000. He proposed to add £100,000 to the additional taxation, and to apply the proceeds to cover the amounts to be paid for this year. Following the Estimates of succeeding years, he proposed that each of those Estimates had a balance largely in excess of the means required expenditure, and certainly not enough to cover the annual payments on the Deficit Loan. Having this proposition of Mr. Samuel, by which the Deficit Loan and the debt of the colony would be to the permanent public debt of the colony, he asked the Treasurer of going away from his principle of not recommending a debt, and of being content with keeping additional taxation, or some extreme measure of retrenchment. Last year the main cause of the Opposition against the then Government was the revenue estimates, and the excess of the estimates. And yet now these very gentlemen raised that objection, with the Treasurer at their elbow, taking care to point out the course in which they had followed, and the course to which they had objected last year. Instead of following out the policy laid down by him when in opposition, the Treasurer had been doing the reverse, and was now making the two ends meet. Mr. Pittsborough pointed out the evil that would occur to the colony by the adoption of a policy which would plunge the colony the expenditure of the State. Such a bill would injure us in the eyes of the capitalists of the land, and put our credit upon a very much lower footing than that it now occupied. He moved that the proposal of the Treasurer to borrow to meet the debt of 1860 be postponed two years before the ratification of the State Constitution. The debate on the stipulations of the State Constitution was continued.—Mr. FAGAN moved the adjournment of the Convention. Mr. SAMUEL objected, and after some discussion the motion was put and negatived by 23 to 13. The amendment of the State Constitution was then taken up. PITTENDON'S amendment was negatived by 23 to 13, and the House went into Committee of Ways and Means.

THURSDAY 21ST JANUARY.

Financial Statement.—On the motion of Mr. E. H. HARRIS, the House went into Committee of Ways and Means. Mr. HARRIS, in rising to comment upon the annual speech of the Treasurer, first alluded to the fact that he had last year estimated the revenue at a sum which was only $10,000 more than had been actually collected. He was thus in no unfavorable position to meet the House, had it fallen to his lot to make the financial statement. He certainly could not fault the Treasurer on the statement he had made, for it embodied only two points: a was an acknowledgment of debt and, and the other was a proposition to borrow to meet the deficit. From the disclosure of the Treasurer the position of affairs appeared to be that there was a deficit now of $350,000; so that the deficit of 1865 had not been reduced. To get rid of this the Treasurer proposed to borrow, justifying his proposal by asserting that the late Government had been three years in office and had made no provision to meet it. Reviewing the Ways and Means of the Government, he complained that the accounts put before the House in a new shape, that they almost unintelligible, and that they failed to get the necessary information. Coming to the account current for 1868, he denied the deficit on that year would be so great as $600. The savings on that year had been put at $100,000 but they would be fully $83,000 than this. Then, again, on the $950,000 bond on Treasury bills and short-dated debentures, he had been a reduction of $182,000, the two first payments having been made. In round numbers the deficit that had been 750,000, the first £100,000 having been put of money raised on these securities and not required, and the second £100,000 being taken from the general revenue. He said, as had been alleged by the Treasurer, that it was the intention of the late Government to use this deficit with the general loans; for the money offered by him to the present Treasurer was for consolidating the public debt of the colony, the short-dated debentures formed part of that, and had been included in the operation of the

He went over the speeches made at rent times by Mr. Samuel to show that gentleman had always asserted that those loans should be met out of current revenue, that the ordinary expenditure of the colony did not to be met by borrowed money. Then, going to the Treasurer's financial statement, he said that the hon. gentleman had deserted those principles which he had so frequently laid down, and he proposed both to borrow to pay the deficit and to meet ordinary expenditure by a loan.

SA. SAMUEL showed from various sources that he fairly estimated the balance deficit for 1868 at $200,000; and produced documents prepared by Mr. [redacted] to show that that gentleman had brought forward papers when in office prepared in precisely the manner as this had been. With regard to the amount of the deficit it was quite time that $200,000 short-dated debentures had been taken up; both payments of $100,000 had been from borrowed money, for the last $100,000 had been taken out of revenue, but left the deficit red and in 1886, which now had to be red by a loan. He defended himself from the charge of desertion of principle, and retorted upon Eagar by quoting passages from speeches made by that hon. gentleman.—Mr. EAGAR offered some indication of charges made against him by Mr.

EAGAR.—Mr. ROBERTSON declared that these were the names of the predecessors in office of the present Government, with the exception that every increase been struck out. When it was said these Estimates were £90,000 in excess of those of last year, it must be borne in mind that they were less than those Estimates with the Supplementary Estimates added; and that they had been issued solely for the purpose of rendering a Supplementary Estimate unnecessary next year. At some time he explained how, in his opinion, the deficiency was caused.—Mr. BUSS dwelt upon the fact that the speaker had distinguished himself when in Opposition by his constant assertions that the revenue and expenditure should be equalised; and thought that the hon. gentlemen's expressed principles, that they had a right to expect either that the revenue

—The House went into committee on the supplementary Estimates. For the services of 1864 previous years £1083 16s. were voted. For the years of 1865, £111 2s. 2d. were voted. For the year of 1866, £1650 ss. 9d. were voted. For the services of the year 1867, the following were voted, only one or two items calling for remark—For the Colonial Secretary's depart-

£12,692 7s.; for the department of the Administration of Justice, £204 10s. 6d.; for the department of the Treasurer, £10,482 7s. 4d.; for the department of the Secretary for Lands, £29,592 6s. 2d.; for the department of the Secretary for Public Works, £15,984 13s. For the service of the year 1900 a vote of £150 12s. 6d., proposed as allowance in lieu of lodging to the Governor's field-camp, was opposed by Mr. J. STEWART, and was carried by a majority of 33 to 4, in favour of the department of the Colonial Secretary.

ON 9s. 11d. were voted, Mr. J. STEWART stating comments on the item of £20,175 0s. 7d., expenses connected with the reception of the
 of Edinburgh; and Mr. DR. SALIS making inquiries into the item of £2000 12s. 8d., for
 of the Water Commission, which inquiries led to a considerable discussion. For the department of Administration of Justice £245 13s. were voted.
 The department of the Treasurer £39,168 15s.
 were proposed, being a reduction of £3990 11s. 1d.

the numbers were 19 to 19. The vote of Mr. S, however, was claimed by the Nocs, on the ground that that gentleman had called out "No" and of "Aye." The SPEAKER allowed the claim, the bill was consequently lost by 20 to 18. The motion that the Order of the Day be discharged was carried by the casting vote of the Speaker, the yeas being 19 to 19; and the subsequent motion that the bill be discharged was carried in the same ratio, the numbers being 20 to 20.

mittee on the St. Andrew's Cathedral Close Bill. Mr. S. Bauer moved a motion to clause 2, that the grant to the City Council should not be made until the Council had paid over to the Treasurer the proceeds of the sale of the former Town Hall site. After a brief discussion, the proposition was carried by 21 to 19. The remainder of the bill was agreed to with some minor amendments. A clause prohibiting the erecting of any building or dwelling upon any part of the site other than that given as a site for the Town Hall, was proposed by Mr. Lucas, and was carried by 18 to 9.

Police Regulation.—Mr. FARNELL moved the second reading of the Police Regulation Extension Bill. The object of that bill being to extend the various Police Regulation Acts to places where Courts of Petty Sessions are held, not within the limits of proclaimed towns. After some discussion, in which Mr. JOSEPHSON, Mr. LUCAS, Mr. J. STUART, and Mr. MARTIN took part, the bill was read a second time, and was subsequently passed through committee.

Supplementary Fund.—In answer to a question, the TREASURER said that the charges on the Supplementary Fund for 1868 had been £14,167 2s. 1d., whilst the amount of contributions in that year had been £10,495 15s. 6d.

The Removal of Messrs. Berny and Jones.—On the motion for again going into Committee of Supply, Mr. MARTIN moved, as an amendment, a censure upon the Government for the removal of Messrs. Berny and Jones. He should not be accused of making this a party matter, but the question involved was one of so much importance that he would have brought it forward at an earlier date. The Government had clearly shown that, and as yet that speech had remained unanswered. It might have been better had Mr. Duncan not been removed, but the fact that he had been removed was sufficient to justify that removal.

With regard to the seizure which was the ostensible cause of the removal, he argued that Mr. Duncan had been removed because he was a member of the Government, and not because he was a member of the Opposition. He had full power to step in and order the restoration of goods which had been seized. Mr. Duncan having been properly removed, his position was vacant, and the Government had no right to fill it with a man who was a member of the Opposition. The vacancy was perfectly legal, as was also the appointment of Mr. Jones to fill the situation vacated by Mr. Berny. These gentlemen, having been appointed, had, when the present Government came into office, been called upon to show cause why they should not be removed, in order to carry out some project of the Government for the removal of Messrs. Berny and Jones. No charge of neglect or misconduct was made against them. They were called upon to answer no charge of any kind. And yet they had been removed, and solely for the purpose of making room for Mr. Jones. If their case were to be made a precedent, Civil servants would be likely to meet with very poor return for their service to the public, for they would never be able to do anything to the satisfaction of the Government, for they might be removed at any moment in the caprice of a Minister. Describing the action taken in the United States when a new President took office, he pointed out that the President had the right to remove any officer in the same office of things; but if one or two officers could be removed, just as well could a dozen or two be removed. If they let in the thin end of the wedge, the Government would be able to remove any officer in the same office of things; but if one or two officers could be removed, just as well could a dozen or two be removed. If they let in the thin end of the wedge, the Government would be able to remove any officer in the same office of things; but if one or two officers could be removed, just as well could a dozen or two be removed.

He then moved a motion for a censure upon the Government for the removal of Messrs. Berny and Jones. He should not be accused of making this a party matter, but the question involved was one of so much importance that he would have brought it forward at an earlier date. The Government had clearly shown that, and as yet that speech had remained unanswered. And yet they had been removed, and solely for the purpose of making room for Mr. Jones. If their case were to be made a precedent, Civil servants would be likely to meet with very poor return for their service to the public, for they would never be able to do anything to the satisfaction of the Government, for they might be removed at any moment in the caprice of a Minister. Describing the action taken in the United States when a new President took office, he pointed out that the President had the right to remove any officer in the same office of things; but if one or two officers could be removed, just as well could a dozen or two be removed. If they let in the thin end of the wedge, the Government would be able to remove any officer in the same office of things; but if one or two officers could be removed, just as well could a dozen or two be removed.

He then moved a motion for a censure upon the Government for the removal of Messrs. Berny and Jones. He should not be accused of making this a party matter, but the question involved was one of so much importance that he would have brought it forward at an earlier date. The Government had clearly shown that, and as yet that speech had remained unanswered. It might have been better had Mr. Duncan not been removed, but the fact that he had been removed was sufficient to justify that removal.

With regard to the seizure which was the ostensible cause of the removal, he argued that Mr. Duncan had been removed because he was a member of the Government, and not because he was a member of the Opposition. He had full power to step in and order the restoration of goods which had been seized. Mr. Duncan having been properly removed, his position was vacant, and the Government had no right to fill it with a man who was a member of the Opposition. The vacancy was perfectly legal, as was also the appointment of Mr. Jones to fill the situation vacated by Mr. Berny. These gentlemen, having been appointed, had, when the present Government came into office, been called upon to show cause why they should not be removed, in order to carry out some project of the Government for the removal of Messrs. Berny and Jones. No charge of neglect or misconduct was made against them. They were called upon to answer no charge of any kind. And yet they had been removed, and solely for the purpose of making room for Mr. Jones. If their case were to be made a precedent, Civil servants would be likely to meet with very poor return for their service to the public, for they would never be able to do anything to the satisfaction of the Government, for they might be removed at any moment in the caprice of a Minister. Describing the action taken in the United States when a new President took office, he pointed out that the President had the right to remove any officer in the same office of things; but if one or two officers could be removed, just as well could a dozen or two be removed. decision, in which it was necessary either to divide the circuit, or to alter its boundaries. Applications were received from circuit riders for an additional minister. Twenty-five such applications were approved by the Conference, and passed on to the Stationing Committee to be reported upon. The Stationing Committee reported that they had no objection to the appointment of the ministers to the various pulpits in the city and suburbs, and to the circuit riders to complete the list of stations. The Rev. J. Harding again brought before the Conference the case of Queensland, and urged that to meet its present emergency the Conference should make a public collection in aid of the Queensland Home Mission Society. This he thought reasonable on connection grounds, and in view of the fact that in the early establishment of Methodism in the other colonies, considerable aid had been received from the Missionary Society in London. The Rev. G. H. Holmes, who had been invited to assist in the collection, was present, and was warmly welcomed. The Rev. W. B. Boyce, one of the missionary secretaries in London, stating that the missionary committee was already so heavily burdened as to be unable to afford any relief. The discussion was closed by a motion that the question be adjourned to some future day.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL REVIEW.

In the money market there has been very little change since the departure of last week's market. A large amount of surplus capital is still idle—the offers of the local banks, and at present the chances of obtaining remunerative investments seem to be very small.
